

Dennis Lassuy

Aquatic Nuisance and Invasive Species Control

Biography

Dennis is the Region 1 Aquatic Nuisance Species Coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. He has degrees from the University of Arizona, the University of Guam, and received his PhD in Fisheries Biology/Marine Resource Management from Oregon State University. Other recent positions he has held include:

- Fisheries Program & Columbia Basin Ecoregion Budget Analyst ('96-'98)
- Endangered Species Regional Biologist ('95)
- U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service Congressional Liaison ('93-'94)
- ANS Task Force Staff Biologist ('91-'92) where he chaired the Intentional Introductions Policy Review Committee of the National Aquatic Nuisance Species Task Force

Recent Services:

- National Conservation Training Center, Invasive Species Training, Instructor (09/2000)
- President's National Invasive Species Council; Regulation and Policy Committee (current)
- Oregon Chapter of the American Fisheries Society (AFS); President (current)
- AFS National; President of Introduced Fish Section ('92-'93); Public Policy Comm. ('96-'98)
- Board of Managers, Washington, D.C., Academy of Science ('93-'94)