Biography

Harry Ashcroft is a graduate of the Nova Scotia College of Geographic Sciences and a commissioned Nova Scotia Land Surveyor and Canada Lands Surveyor. Harry operated a private surveying practice in the 1970s and 1980s, primarily involved in cadastral surveying and mapping projects. He has been employed with the Nova Scotia Department of Natural Resources since 1989.

In his current position as Manager, Crown Land Disposals, Harry is responsible for the permitting of activities and the conveyance of property interests with respect to provincially owned Crown land (including submerged land); the designation of Provincial Parks, Trails, and Protected Beaches; and related policy development.

Harry's personal interests include family, music, travel and photography. His current pet project is helping with the organization of next year's Submerged Lands Management Conference in Halifax.
